Women's Lives and the Improvement of Female Farmers' Economical Status

Masato Imoto (Professor, Kochi Women's University)

Toshiko Ohno (Central Agriculture Promotion Center)

Nobu Kitamura (Central Agriculture Promotion Center)

Yoko Iwahara (Council of Kazaguruma Market)

In the morning session, the participants took an observation tour of direct sales stores of agricultural products, which are operated by female farmers in and around Kochi city.

The afternoon lecture overviewed the history, system and significance of women's home life improvement in Japan from women's point of view. The lecture included reports on the historical process of improvement of female farm workers' economical status and recent problems, while they developed their management ability of business to organize sales of their agricultural products. After the lecture, the participants examined examples of home life improvement activities and discussed possible formulas for improving women's quality of life.
